

exactphilosophy.net

avantgarde

Welcome to my garden. . .

This section is more diverse than the rest of my website, which centers around a specific idea and ways to make it more concrete. While some articles and exhibits here are rather curiosities or art, others are very straightforward and self-contained presentations of quite specific facts or ideas. Overall, my website is more like a garden, because it is never finished. From time to time, new things grow and sometimes others are cut back, hopefully becoming more and more beautiful and natural in time. In any case, I am doing this as a hobby.

In practice this means that some articles and other exhibits are settled, i.e. likely stable and well thought through, the language polished. Others may be wild, avantgarde, work in progress, some maybe purposely unpolished, and so on. Just be aware that I am essentially playing with things here, also in the interest of maybe finding new impulses for research and life. But it is essentially still a garden, not a jungle, even if it may partially appear like one in time.

In time, some of my thoughts are planned to appear in the form of generally accessible books, initially in German, later possibly in other languages. See the website of my one-man publishing company at artecat.ch:

Artecat
Alain Stalder

My web server at my home near Zürich (Bezirk Horgen):

